ADDITIONAL RULES INFORMATION

Slide tackling is treated as a foul in all age groups and will result in a direct free kick (or penalty).

The ball is out of play only when it completely passes over one of the four field borders. The entire ball must be over the line, until it is, the ball is still in play. A player may be entirely out of bounds and as long as the ball is touching one blade of grass with a white marking on it, the ball is still in and can be played by the "out of bounds" player.

Handling the ball (a "hand ball") involves a deliberate act of a player making contact with the ball with the hand or arm. The following must be considered: •The movement of the hand towards the ball (not the ball towards the hand) •The distance between the opponent and the ball (unexpected ball) •The position of the hand does not necessarily mean that there is an offence.

Soccer is a contact sport. The general rule is that shoulder to shoulder contact is allowable. Other contact depending on how hard, where it happens, the outcome of it, and a few other factors may or may not be ok. The referee is tasked with looking at contact and making sure nothing unfair or unsafe happens and call the game accordingly.

A foul isn't always called -- and it's on purpose. In most sports, if an infraction occurs, it is called immediately and play stops. In soccer, if a foul occurs, the referee looks for what is called "advantage." If the team that was fouled has the chance of benefitting in some way from the foul or after the foul (a chance to move the ball significantly down the field or even score for instance), the referee lets play go on and calls "advantage." At this point, s/he also moves both arms up straight and parallel to each other from his waist to his chest and may say something like "play on."

Offside is the most confusing concept for spectators, coaches, and players to grasp. Despite what you think you know about offside, unless you are lined up perfectly, you won't have the proper angle to even comment on such an offense if it's close (if the player is offside by 10 yards, it's much easier to tell.) So it's better to simply let the call go the way the AR sees it since it's a judgment call involving several different factors.
